Jette Frölich's history

In 1966, Jette Frölich began designing paper decorations.

The Danish interior design magazine "Bo Bedre" saw her design and published an article about her in their Christmas issue, and thus the whole adventure started.

She spent 3 years in Tehran with her husband and 4 children, where she was inspired by the ornamentation of minarets. It was during these years that the idea of starting her own business was born.

In 1973, the family moved back to Denmark, where Jette Frölich bought a small handicraft company that made decorations from natural materials, including spruce cones.

The famous Danish Design Centre "Den Permanente" presented her first Christmas collection that year, and at the same time Jette Frölich opened a Christmas studio in her own home.

In 1976, Illums Bolighus asked her to decorate a 14-metre Christmas tree and be their Christmas artist that year. It turned out to be 29 years.

From 1980, Jette Frölich made decorations for the entire Royal Scandinavia group, which included Georg Jensen, Holmegaard, The Royal and Illums Bolighus.
